

WILL THIS HOUSING FUNDING GO TO WASTE?

Housing funding is available, but will it be used? Learn how smart planning and feasibility studies unlock funding for crisis housing faster.

 Published: March 12, 2025

Will This Housing Funding Go to Waste?

Another $1 billion in housing funding has been unlocked for crisis and transitional housing—a lifeline for those in desperate need. But here's the real question: will it translate into real homes, or will red tape and incomplete planning leave it sitting untouched?

The Key to Securing Funding: Feasibility & Planning

The truth is, housing funding doesn't flow without a watertight plan. Feasibility studies, accurate costings, DA approvals—these aren't just box-ticking exercises. They're what give funders the confidence to say "yes." Yet, too often, well-intentioned projects stall because the groundwork isn't done properly.

What Smart Housing Leaders Are Doing Differently

Australian not-for-profit professionals and politicians who are smart about their investments in getting homeless people into homes quicker and at scale than most others know that history proves a simple truth: when proposals are professionally structured, funding approvals skyrocket. The difference between a successful funding bid and another missed opportunity isn't luck—it's preparation.

Unlocking the Funds: The Role of Experts

The funding is there. The need is urgent. The missing piece? Partnering with experts who know how to get it done and deliver homes where they're needed most. Futurebuild Group's Projects Pathway has helped organisations secure funding and deliver housing faster by aligning planning, feasibility, and execution into a clear, structured process.

#modernmethodsofconstruction #housingcrisis
#affordablehousing #communityhousing #housingpolicy

